Hotel Felix Kicks Off Earth Month with Eco-Chic Event to Celebrate LEED Silver Certification
First-Ever Chicago Hotel to Receive Recognition for Monumental Achievement in Energy and Environmental Design

CHICAGO (March 15, 2011) – Hotel Felix, located at 111 W. Huron St., kicks off Earth Month by gathering Chicago’s top dignitaries for an unveiling of the prestigious Leadership in Energy and Environmental Design™ (LEED) Silver certification for commercial interiors from the U.S. Green Building Council (USGBC).

NBC’s Environmental Reporter Ginger Zee will unveil the award at 4 p.m. on April 1 at Hotel Felix, Chicago’s first hotel to earn the prestigious status.

A number of city and state dignitaries are invited, including First Deputy Commissioner for the City of Chicago Department of Environment, Josh Milberg; U.S. Senator Dick Durbin; Alderman Brendan Reilly (42nd Ward); and Honorable Jan Schakowsky (Illinois’ 9th Congressional District); along with other civic leaders who support environmental issues.

“Gathering our supporters and environmental influencers for the LEED Silver certification unveiling acknowledges not only our efforts, but those of the community,” said George Jordan, general manager of Hotel Felix Chicago. “We’re honored to be recognized by the U.S. Green Building Council and thrilled that NBC’s Ginger Zee can join us for the unveiling.”

According to Jordan, the hotel’s design includes many ongoing eco-friendly efficiencies, such as in-room motion sensors to control heat and air conditioning for a savings of about $30,000 per year; fluorescent lighting throughout the property that saves nearly $44,000 per year; and water waste reduction plumbing that saves one million gallons of water annually.

The invite-only celebration will continue with a complimentary cocktail reception at Elate, an upscale organic restaurant adjacent to Hotel Felix.
